The Great Dinosaur Rush is On! It's 1880 and you're an eager paleontologist finding fossils in the America West. But you're not alone?your rivals will stop at nothing to get the best bones for themselves! And the dishonesty and backstabbing don't stop when you get back to the museum, because your enem?????ies will try to discredit your discoveries to gain prestige. Win by being smart, daring, and sneakier than everyone else!

Out in the field, fossil hunters must survive natural [1]disasters and attempts by other players to steal and destroy dinosaur bones. Back at the museum, the conflict continues when the scientists carry their battle to the newspapers and scientific journals as they race to achieve scientific immortality!

Most of the wild events in BONE WARS are based on things which actually happened. Edward Drinker Cope really did mount an elasmosaur's head on the wrong end of the skeleton, and then tried to buy up and destroy all the copies of the journal describing it. O. C. Marsh really did use his personal fortune to hire away all the best fossil collectors from rivals. And the indestructible Charles Sternberg had to outrun flash floods in western canyons. For a time the personal feud between Cope and Marsh involved everyone from the U.S. Geological Survey to the editors of the New York Herald.
